

Protecting Our Voting Rights During the Coronavirus Crisis

The Coronavirus outbreak has put enormous pressure on our election system. We have already seen the impact on primary elections around the nation. Moving forward, we must ensure voters can safely, securely, and efficiently exercise their right to vote while still protecting our public health. As local, state and national legislatures take measures to address this crisis, it is essential that we call on our representatives to include key efforts to address the protection of our voting rights. We must fight to ensure our elections are not disrupted through November and states take the necessary steps to expand access to the ballot box so everyone can participate in our democracy. CWA is fully committed, as it has always been, to ensuring all workers have access to the ballot box.
